NEVADA CITY —

Sportmen's Paradise

WHERE, WHEN and HOW THEY'RE BITING and Other Sportsmen's Items

Gold and the other lakes of Sierra county are still giving good fishing, according to reports from the area. The north fork of the Yuba river has been good to fly fishermen.

Some lakes are beginning to show signs of being fished out, Bowman and French among them.

H. F. "Si" Sofge, secretary of the Nevada County Sportsmen's association, spent the holidays fishing with his son, Harold, of Susanville in Butte lake in Mt. Lassen national park. He reported the lake was good but difficult of access.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rogers (Dale Evans) and his three boys of Hollywood were weekend fishing enthusiasts at Lake Bowman.

No matter what else took place July Fourth was a great day for Earl Adams, Jr., 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Adams, Grass Valley.

Fishing at Bullards Bar dam, he landed a beautiful large-mouthed bass, having a fight on his hands before he pulled the fish over the side of the boat.

The large bass weighed four and three-quarter pounds and measured 21 inches long.

Some 300 baby chinese pheasants were delivered to the rearing pens of the Sierraville ranger station. In September when they have matured the birds will be released in Sierra valley.

About 200 adult chinese pheasants and 100 valley quail were also liberated here last week. The birds came from the Sacramento game farm.

After declaring the elk herd too large for the amount of forage in the area, the fish and game commission set a 10-day controlled open season from Dec. 2 to 11, inclusive, in Inyo county only. No more than 75 males and 50 females may be taken.

To apply for one of the 125 special permits, resident citizen California hunters may contact the Los Angeles office of the division of fish and game, state building, before Oct. 26. Applications must be submitted on an official printed form, and will not be accepted from hunters under the age of 16 years.

A public drawing will be held Nov. 2, at the Los Angeles office to select the 125 lucky candidates. Sixty alternate names will also be drawn.

Successful applicants will be informed of special elk hunting regulations upon payment of the $10 permit fee.

Licensed citizen bow and arrow hunters may participate, but employees of the division of fish and game and persons who have been issued an elk hunting permit since 1939 are ineligible.

For pollution of San Francisco bay waters with oil, the Standard Oil company has been fined $250 in the court of Judge Donald F. Creedon. Citation was issued by State Fish and Game Warden James Reutgen.

Sale of 1949 angling licenses to California sportsmen brought the division of fish and game a total revenue of $1,198,398 by June 1, it is reported by H. R. Dunbar, chief of the bureau of licenses.

Development and expansion of three fish hatchery installations in the southern San Joaquin valley with wildlife conservation board funds will mean an added annual production of at least 1,500,000 catchable-sized trout for the area, it is reported by Board Consultant Seth Gordon.

From its three-year proceeds of state horse racing funds totalling nine million dollars, the board recently approved new hatchery installations on the Tule river, Tulare county, and on the San Joaquin river, Fresno county. Material expansion also was authorized at the Moorehouse Springs hatchery in Tulare county.

Total expenditure on the three installations will be $385,000, Gordon stated.

WILD RIDE IN TRUCK DEMOLISHES VEHICLE LEAVES RIDERS SAFE

One look at the truck chassis as it sets in the yard of the Boston Ravine Auto Wreckers, Grass Valley, will put you to wonder what miraculous fate was riding with Gerald Patterson and his companion of Grass Valley as they careened down the Tahoe-Ukiah highway grade towards Nevada City at a speed of 105 miles an hour Friday night.

Near the top of the grade Patterson attempted to kick the heavily loaded truck into lower gear only to have it jam in neutral. A touch of the brake brought realization an air line had snapped. By that time Patterson had picked up too much speed to slap it into the bank and he elected to ride her down.

The truck failed to make the sharp curve near the bottom of the hill and the vehicle turned over and skidded 150 feet to a stop. The two men were pinned in the cab but suffered only one minor scratch.

JUVENILE HOME RECOMMENDED TO SUPERVISORS

Nevada county probation committee, headed by J. E. Keegan, Grass Valley, appeared before the board of supervisors Wednesday morning urging allocation of funds in the 1949 budge for construction of a juvenile detention home. Appearing with Keegan were Mrs. Howard Penrose, member of the probation committee; and Mrs. Victor Montre, Mrs. William W. Esterly and Mrs. Opal Hendricks, representing the Grass Valley Business and Professional Women's club.

Keegan called attention to 36 cases handled in juvenile court the past year without facilities for holding, counseling and correction provided by a detention home. Keegan declared the only place a juvenile could be held is in county jail, a practice frowned upon by courts.

Keegan suggested cooperation with Sierra county, which is also without a detention home. Keegan said he believed many juveniles could be corrected if the proper facilities were available.

Warren Odell, chairman of the board, asked the committee to prepare information on cases handled by the county, types of buildings recommended and costs to enable the board to conduct a survey.

BODY OF MAASCERG IS FOUND BY TWO YOUTHS

The body of Emil Maascerg, 78, badly decomposed, was found late Wednesday afternoon by Howard Evans, Jr., 12, and Stanley Clewett, 12, both of Grass Valley. The body was found lying on a rock dump in a clearing near the old Jenny Lind mine, a few miles north of the Alta Hill rest home he had wandered from June 2.

He was identified through the clothing he was wearing at the time of his disappearance.

The body is at Myers Grass Valley mortuary pending efforts to contact relatives.

Many Visitors Use Pioneer Park Over Holiday Weekend

Many visitors from all over the U. S. used the picnic facilities of Pioneer park over the weekend, according to Fred Bush, custodian of the park.

Small groups of picnickers taxed the facilities of the park and Bush opened Seaman's lodge to use by the overflow groups.

MONUMENT TO SARGENT IS DEDICATED

Peter T. Conmy, Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West, Sunday afternoon dedicated the Aaron A. Sargent monument as a California historic landmark in Pioneer cemetery in exercises that were a part of the Nevada county Fourth of July Centennial celebration.

Joseph R. Knowland, chairman of the California Centennial commission, told the assemblage of approximately 300 the historic landmarks committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West plans to place historic markers at You Bet, Red Dog and other Nevada county ghost towns.

Aaron Sargent, San Francisco, grandson of the Nevada county pioneer whose memory was honored by Sunday's program, also spoke on behalf of the family.

The Rev. Dahlgren Casey, pastor of the Nevada City Methodist church, gave the invocation and read a poem, entitled "Garden of Sleep," written especially for the occasion by Adeline Merriam Conner, poet laureate of the Sierras.

Other speakers were Elmer Stevens, president of the Nevada County Historical society; George L. Jones, former superior court judge; Edmund G. Kinyon, historical editor of the Grass Valley Union; George H. Calanan, city clerk of Nevada City.

The speakers platform was decked with bunting and centered with a portrait of Aaron A. Sargent, which has been hung for many years in the Odd Fellows hall in Nevada City.

Shamberger Released From Management Of GV Memorial Building

Nevada county board of supervisors by a vote of 3-2 discharged Oscar Shamberger as manager of the Veterans Memorial building in Grass Valley and placed it in control of a seven-man committee to be named by the Grass Valley American Legion post.

Chairman Warren Odell and J. C. Coughlan were dissenters.

Americans Long Ways From Pioneer Conception of Fourth Knowland Tells Nevada Folks

Joseph R. Knowland, chairman of the California Centennial Commission, spoke to a packed auditorium Monday noon, as the principal speaker of patriotic Fourth of July exercises held on the final day of the 1949 Nevada County Fourth of July Centennial Celebration. Knowland was introduced by Earl Covey, Grass Valley member of the commission, and chairman of the program.

The Grass Valley band, directed by Harold George and the Grass Valley Gold Miners chorus rendered selections and Peter T. Conmy, Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West, spoke briefly.

The exercises were held immediately following the parade.

"I am inclined to believe that the country-wide movement for sane Fourth of July celebrations originally conceived in an effort to lessen the hazard of fire and of injury to exurgerant young Americans has had its effect upon Independence day oratory. There is less hyperbolical exaggerated language. In those days it was thought patriotism must be aroused by the music of bands, the waving of flags, the noise of exploding bombs, warnings against foreign entanglements, and the glorification of military leaders.

"Today we have the same love and respect for our country's flag, the same reverence for our military heroes, but our thoughts revert to the grave problems facing our country and the world. We are sobered, and deeply concerned for the future. Two devastating world wars, and the tool of human life resulting, have made us abhor such conflicts and we are seeking devices and methods for peaceful and just solutions of disagreements that may arise.

"Looking back, how many speakers upon occasions such as this quoted with great emphasis the admonition of the father of our country, the first president of this republic, George Washington, in his warnings against 'entangling foreign alliances'. He stressed the dangers of 'insidious wiles of foreign influence. I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens,' he declared, 'the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of American government.'

"In the light of what happened

SUPERVISORS DENY CLAIM FOR REFUND OF TAX LAND SALE

Nevada county board of supervisors late Wednesday denied the claim of Warren E. Raddatz, Gold Run, who sought refund of $3100 purchase price of property sold for delinquent taxes by the county plus $20,641.20 additional expenses incurred by Raddatz before the property was discovered to belong to the federal government.

The property had once been homesteaded and not proved and lapsed back to public domain. In 1903 it was on the Nevada county tax rolls under the name of Joseph Ashburn and taxes became delinquent.

Idle for years the property, 160 acres, was sold to Raddatz July 19, 1948, after George D. Beyer applied to purchase the property. The property near Lake Spaulding had been sold to the state in 1904 and deeded to the state in 1909.

Advertised by legal notice and approved by the state controller's office Tax Collector Elma Hecker's office was packed and bidding was spirited. Beyer opened with a bid of $160 and Raddatz was awarded the property on his bid of $3100.

Raddatz built a road into the timber land for $3500 and felled and moved out 829,000 log feet for which the federal government asks $13,678.50. He felled an additional 171,000 feet which has not ben removed and for which the federal government asks stumpage charge of $3,462.70.

The board denied the claim on the advice of District Attorney Vernon Stoll.

Grandson Returns To Scenes of Argonaut's Gold Prospecting

Rex and Helen Miller of Glendale, were Tuesday tourists of Nevada City and the county. Rex is the grandson of George Washington Miller who came to Nevada City in 1850, struck it rich and kept it to take back home to Iowa.

The argonaut came across the plains by ox team and returned via the Isthmus of Panama.

A year in the prosaic east and young Miller struck out for California once again, but fate in the guise of a pretty girl changed his mind. He met his future wife in the wagon train he was accompanying west from Independence, Mo., and inasmuch as her family was going to Oregon country that's where young Miller went to spend the rest of his life.

COLLIER-BURNS ACT

On June 10 we ran an editorial entitled "Shouldn't We Blame Ourselves" decrying the trend of encroachment by higher governments into the fields of local government. We asked the question whether we are to blame ourselves when state government takes over the problems our local governments shirk.

A few days ago the state senate concurred in a resolution calling for county responsibility to provide matching funds for road projects which the state engineer will select.

The resolution results directly from the unclever machinations of county supervisors who want their road engineer or commissioner to be a figurehead while the supervisors continue merrily on their way piddling the funds away in patchwork aimed primarily for votes at the next election.

The builders of our county "roads" and we use the word hestitantly, apparently operate on the theory that "if we build better roads people will go racing around and killing themselves." But the state and federal money comes to the counties for high-speed highways built as safely as skilled engineering can provide.

The Collier-Burns act, under which we have set up a road commissioner with engineering experience, calls for the county to have a master program of road project planning to guide expenditure of some $182.530 for 1949-50. To put this program into operation the act calls for the board of supervisors to adopt an official map following a public meeting; this map to show each road proposed to be improved in the county primary system.

The state highway department evidently recognizes that county "roads" need financing for better construction than was done in the gravel and grade rathole period. For that reason the Collier-Burns act calls for an engineering road commissioner and a project plan. Planning to date has been remarkable in its lack.

Another income, and with a tighter string on the money, appears in the building of roads using so-called "Christmas tree" funds. The road commissioner must show the state his program before he gets the money and he must spend it where the plan calls for.

So if we continue to pour our road-building funds into roads that never improve can we blame other than ourselves if the state moves in, retires our commissioner, statesmen and our road program, and sets up a bureaucratic road system?

Then, will our statemen retire to their low-gear rocking chairs, watch us speed over our state-built county roads and cuss the encroachment of non-local government—never for a moment admitting they helped speed the encroachment by doing nothing—and doing that without plans?

SENATORS DISCUSS TAFT'S NEW LABOR BILL

TIME OUT FOR A GOOD SWIM

Just Wonderin'

I Wonder when our minds advance
Upon a single track,
If they attain a certain goal
And then come ambling back;
Or do they just roll on and on
In their own little train,
Until they quite possess and rule
The functions of the brain.

I came to this line of thought when I discovered that my own thoughts were definitely upon a single track. Still here in the midst of Cherry Festivals, Fourth of July celebrations and Forty Niner parades, it is difficult to keep an open mind, especially when one follows the trend of modern spectacles devised to bring the men and deeds of 1849 before persent day generations.

I've harped upon this subject; but isn't it true that in reviving our memories of the old Forty Nine, we sometimes fail to give honor where honor is due? Is it not true that in many cases those who seek to repeat the sights and sounds of the past, succeed only in creating that which is grotesque and quite unworthy of the claims that make upon our credultiy?

The celebration at Coloma was marred by the Hollywood touch, and the history of that thrilling time when Marhsall discovered gold in the American river was distorted until those who knew the sequence of other day events were amazed and somewhat disgusted.

I think the outbursts of misrepresentation are abating and by the time our centennial days are drawing to a close, the real pioneer and the true argonaut will be coming into their own and receiving their meed of public attention.

The purpose of the Centennial is of course to refresh our memories of California's gold rush days and to portray for the younger generations the stirring events of those glamorous times. We seek to honor the past by recalling the bold, strong and stalwart men of old and presenting true and unvarnished pictures of them and their tasks.

It is pleasing to see that many localities along the mother lode are trying to tell the story truthfully and convincingly. The men and women who led California into statehood and established her among her sister states began their work early. San Francisco for instance notes that a piano recital was given in that famous town as early as 1850 and that grand opera came a year or two later. The men and women who crossed the plains or came around the Horn brought their ideals of decency and culture with them. In every small community, in every roaring camp the story is the same; desperadoes, gamblers, wild women, et al, were forced into the background as the forces of law and order took over. Homes were built, churches and school houses followed; our towns and our cities were founded, the resources of the state developed and it is to these men and women that we owe our allegiance today. It is our duty to frown upon those who seek to perpetuate the names and actions of outlaws and desperadoes.

I am glad that our own Nevada City is following this trend and the ceremonies honoring the memory of A. A. Sargent are a credit to the genuine spirit of patriotism which if followed will bring back to memory the lives and deeds of many a man and woman of those early grey dawn years and tend to enshrine them in the hearts of every true Californian.

GOLD DIGGER'S TRAIL

Charles Scott Haley

PERU—SEVEN YEARS AFTER

After being discharged from the American Expeditionary Force in Columbia, South Carolina, and returning to San Francisco, I came to Washington to look for a job. It so happened that my friend, Van H. Manning, was director of the Bureau of Mines at that time, and as I was first on a civil service list as mining engineer, he asked me if I would undertake the task of making a report on placer operations in Alaska. I accepted the work, and was temporarily certified, while I went on to New York to arrange my affairs. While in New York, I encountered a well known petroleum geologist and administrator whom I had met in London, who possesses probably the most active and farseeing mind of any geologist that I have had the pleasure to meet.

He had recently taken charge of the exploration department of one of our largest oil companies. At that time, before the opening of the great Texas oil fields, it was surmised that the visible supply of petroleum was within sight of its ultimate limit. Therefore, all of the major companies were trying to tie up acreage in new fields. Dr. Veatch had had his eye on northern and central Peru for some time, and, knowing that I had been in Peru and spoke the language, he asked me if I would be interested in going down and making arrangements for his company to tie up a substantial acreage.

The idea appealed to me very much, but I told him that I was already committed to the Bureau of Mines work. He called up Mr. Manning and asked if I could be released, because of the strategic economic value of the work in Peru. Mr. Manning thereupon gave me his release in a very gracious letter which freed me without prejudice, and I prepared for my trip south. It was not very long before I was on my way to New Orleans, armed with letter of credit and introductions to various powers that were in Peru.

This time I landed without incident in Panama, and took a Grace Line steamer to Callao. I could not see that there had been much change in the looks of the city when I landed and was greeted by the usual mob of gesticulating "fleteros" who wanted to handle my baggage up to Lima.

The city of Lima itself had changed but little, although it was rumored that much new construction was going into effect under the new President, Leguia. I went to my old standby, the Gran Hotel Maury, and took rooms there, without any attention being paid to me, and then got in touch with the local head of the Cerro de Pasco, who steered me into proper channels for my necessary contacts with the Government of Peru. My attorney was Alejandro Puente, who was a first cousin of the President, and therefore was able to arrange any meetings or appointments that I wished.

Dr. Puente was a very fine lawyer and a very charming gentleman, belonging to one of the oldest families in Lima, and its best society. Here I learned just how exclusive the "old families" of Latin America can be. Money or rank makes no difference in one's reception. I was six months in daily working contact with Dr. Puente before he decided that he knew me well enough to invite me to his home. Afther that, every door of Lima was open to me socially—before that, none. Business relations with the heads of State were easy enough, but entrance into their home life was a different matter.

In the city of Lima there are only a few families who are of pure Latin blood, whose names go back as far as the time of Pizarro. They number among them some of the leaders of Peru, but the ruling class is by no means confined to them. Many of the most aggressive leaders of the country are of mixed Latin and Latin and Indian blood, and their wealth has enabled them to educate their children to a culture which will compare favorably with that of the purer racial strain.

As a major in the army reserves, I enjoyed some prestige, but most of my ability to deal favorably with the government came from the fact that I was introduced under the aegis of the Cerro de Pasco. At that time there were agents of five major petroleum companies in Peru, all seeking the same concessions that I was after. Most of them were cutting quite a social dash and entertaining officials and congressmen right and left—notably one English lord who had taken a villa in Chorillos, the fashionable suburb of Lima. I made no attempt to entertain anybody, and kept to my very modest lodgings in the hotel, and yet could see any official from the President down on two days notice.

My first interview with President Leguia was very interesting. It happens that at the time of my first visit to Peru, seven years before, Leguia was thrown out by a revolution. As the vast crowd milled in the Plaza de Armas, yelling for his blood, this little man, about five feet four in height, came down from the Palace ahead of his ministers, looking neither to right nor left, and the crowd made way for him. His steel eye and indomitable will cowed them even when they knew he was the under dog. He had gone to London and amassed a ftrune in the mean time with the South Seas Trading Company. He was about sixty years of age, and could have passed the comfortable life of an English gentleman with ample means when he was asked to return and sit upon what was then a volcano, during the declining years of his life. From 1919 to 1935, he was practically dictator of Peru, and was eventually overthrown by a turn of the wheel which left him, broken and abandoned, to die on board one of his own ships in Callao harbor.

at Yalta and Tehran and at other meetings and conferences after the second World war, followed by the Marshall plan, the Atlantic pact and many of the proposals now pending, President Washington's words of caution have been entirely disregarded. The Red menace has put us in Europe to the very limit of our financial resources. China, equally threatened, we have, I fear, shamefully neglected. The general thinking appears to be that we cannot afford to disregard the plight of those sixteen European nations under pressure from Russia, and must show a willingness to aid in rehabilitating and encouraging them that they may become self supporting. The effort may fail, but our willingness to help may increase our prestige throughout the world, and America will feel it at least tried.

"We must have no illusions about the Atlantic pact, for the obligations that may arise under this well-meaning agreement may mean supplying those countries coming within its provisions with armament costing the United States untold billions of dollars.

In view of all these problems which have arisen as the aftermath of the two last world wars, it is not surprising that there is less effort today to arouse patriotism by recounting the glories of armed conflict. We are too close to the picture of expended billions, of the ravaging of fertile fields, the destruction of commerce, and to the awful effusion of blood desolating thousands of homes. No, our thoughts go to formulas aimed to bring about peaceful solutions of threatened hostilities. It is both regrettable and discouraging that these peace efforts, including the United Nations, have not met to date with greater success. These efforts have been thwarted largely by one nation. They have shattered the dreams of those who look forward toward that utopia of 'one world'.

"It appears to be the concensus in congress, the press and the people, that it is perhaps better to make the sacrifices, to run the risk even of the impairment of financial stability, than to fail in a real effort to halt the mad rush of the forces of Stalin and his cohorts. In this country, through widely publicized investigations, it has been directly brought home to us that even in the United States of America there are forces at work seeking to tear down what our forefathers have built. Many people are confused in their thinking, and can we blame them in the light of events occurring at home and abroad? What causes us pause is the knowledge that there are communistic leaders among us who say that war with Soviet Russia would be opposed as 'an undemocratic and anantisocialist war'. Perhaps if George Washington was in our midst today he would realize that events have made the policy he outlined unworkable and perhaps obsolete.

"We must not lose heart, we must maintain our courage, we must watch and seek to curb the forces that work against the best interest of this country. We must agree with Herbert Hoover 'that next to religious faith the deepest of spiritual emotions are love of country and patriotism. These emotions are imbedded in struggles and sacrifices to maintain independence; they embrace constructive ideals: unity of purpose and symbols'.

"At home here in California, in the belief that love of state inspires patriotism, we are striving through our centennial commemorations to arouse interest in the story of the pioneer builders of this commonwealth who journeyed here by land and sea enduring hardships and sufferings that inspire reverence for their memories.

"One of California's three centennial years, the gold discovery's hundredth aniversary, in 1948, has passed with appropriate observance at Coloma and elsewhere; this year recalls the gold rush days of 1949, and in 1950 the admission of California to statehood. Through pageants, publications, moving pictures, historic exhibits, the marking of historic spots, interest in the fascinating and inspiring story of California is being brought home to our citizens.

"These pioneers were never discouraged as they headed over the plains for this land of promise by attacks of hostile Indians, by what appeared to be insurmountable mountain barriers, unmarked trails, hunger or other privations. The fever-infested isthmus and the long sea voyages failed likewise to kill their determination to reach the land where gold abounded. Many of them, whether they succeeded or failed, remained to build up a great empire in this land bordering the broad Pacific.

"These early Californians established stable government, they took drastic methods to punish and prevent crime, they built schools and churches, and after the organization of the great pony express venture they built a transcontinental railroad, uniting by bands of steel the great west with the east. Fast communication was also established by the construction of telegraph lines.

"Into every public and private school of California, through the cooperation of the department of education, a film, with sound and color, is telling the California story from the gold discovery by James W. Marshall on January 24, 1848, to the great developments and progress of today. Thus this generation, who will be the future leaders of the state, are having impressed upon them the romantic and intriguing story of the state within which they reside.

"Having in mind to further interest the children of California there is now on the road the 'historical caravan', a traveling museum journeying from county to county, into the school yards, a project unique and not attempted in any other state.

"This year, 1949, is the hundredth anniversary of the gold rush days and the events scheduled are the celebration at the state-owned and well preserved mining town of Columbia on July 15, 16, 17, with a great pageant, historic parade and early California plays in the old Fallon theater which has been preserved from pioneer days.

"At Monterey on August 29 through September 5 will be held the centenary of the drafting and signing at Colton hall in that city of the constitution under which California was admitted to statehood.

"In the Death Valley country, southern counties in the vicinity, on November 14, are to re-enact the epical story of the trek of the California bound emigrants over that southern route.

"In 1950 will occur the culmination of all the three centennials years, the admission of California to statehood.

"What inspiration can we gather from these Independence day and California centennial celebrations? What thoughts can we carry away that will make us better Americans and more useful citizens? The easiest way in life is to ignore the call to public service, permitting the burdens to fall upon the shoulders of those few in every community who are conscientious as to their responsibilities. This is unfair, and in a way cowardly.

"Is there any business of more transcendent importance, with larger capital investment, than the business of government? Excessive taxes lower the income and retard the growth of every private business, and are largely chargeable to public indifference and shirking of civic responsibilities.

"Let us resolve on this day of patriotic memories that loyalty to our country is the first requisite of good citizenship, and that we must stand ready to defend our nation against the attacks of those, whether occupying high or inferior positions, who seek to belittle or tear down our institutions. Constructive criticism of governmental agencies is the right of every American citizen, but no progress is made if we give ear to those who constantly pull down, offering in exchange nothing constructive. They would destroy but not build. By insinuation and subtle words they seek to shake our confidence in those occupying high places, but themselves furnish no constructive leadership, resting content if they have created dissatisfaction and raised doubts.

"On this natal day of America let all good citizens realize that there are problems for all of us to solve. The demand of the hour, the crying need of the moment, is to increase the ranks of the patriotic citizen, made up of the man and the woman of vision, self-sacrificing, able, strong and public-spirited, willing to accept as his or her reward the self-satisfaction which comes with the knowledge of duty well performed, of a public service unselfishly rendered. Under the inspiration of this splendid gathering may we re-dedicate ourselves to the task at hand, the building of a greater, more powerful and united America and a state whose prestige, and advancement may continue and the patriotism of whose citizenship may increase with the years."

FOREST SERVICE ACTS TO RELIEVE LUMBER PRICE ADJUSTMENTS

To provide purchasers of national forest timber with "insurance" against a squeeze between the high cost of timber and falling lumber prices, the U. S. forest service this week took action to adjust the cost of national forest timber periodically to fluctuating market prices.

Perry A. Thompson, U. S. regional forester for California, explained national forest timber is appraised and advertised at a minimum price for sale to bidders. Under the procedure in effect until today the successful bidder cut and paid for the timber at the bid price, which was never less than the advertised price. If the lumber market went down, or up, the price of his timber remained at the bid rate.

Under the new system, the procedure will be the same except that the price the bidder agrees to pay for the timber will be adjusted quarterly to the average market prices of lumber as shown by the price index of the Western Pine association. The adjustment will be 40 per cent of the decrease, or increase of the price of lumber as shown by the index. For example, if the lumber price index drops $10 below the base index, the cost of national forest timber will automatically drop $4. If the price index goes up $10, the cost of timber will go up $4. The new system can not apply to short-term national forest timber sale contracts already in force, but may be used in existing long-term contracts which have provision for stumpage rate adjustment.

Thompson said, "As a result of uncertainty in the general economic situation, lumber manufacturers have ben reluctant to buy national forest timber at present rates. Many believe that lumber prices are headed for a sharp drop in 1949.

"The effect of this new system is to divide the risk of lumber price fluctuations between the government and the timber purchaser. Our purpose is to contribute to the stability of California's lumber industry, its workers and the many communities dependent on timber from the national forests."

All 800 pasties prepared by St. Patrick's Catholic church, under the supervision of Mrs. John McCrink and William H. Cary, were consumed by the picnickers.

William Doidge and George Carson, Oakland, and former residents of Grass Valley, sang at the program. Joseph Smith, mayor of Oakland, was the principal speaker. Smith dwelt on the centennial year of the gold discovery, extolled the virtues of democratic form of government, and called for peace and prosperity for the nation.

The Grass Valley Braves defeated the Nevada City Athletics 8-2 at Watt Park in a Placer-Nevada Baseball league game Sunday.

Ex-Loyalton Mayor Dies in Washington

Word has been received here of the death of Walter H. Duncan, 65, Friday, July 1, in Washington, D. C. He served as mayor of Loyalton from 1913 to 1919.

In 1933 he became state auditor for the civil works administration in Reno, became a WPA executive, and was assigned to Washington, D. C. At the time of his death he was deputy commissioner of the bureau of community facilities in the national capital.

He was a native of Somerville, Mass.

FAIR BOARD ASKS FOR MORE MONEY FOR ROADS

Malcolm Hammill, director of the 17th District Agricultural association, appeared before the Nevada county board of supervisors and asked for $200 or $300 for maintenance of roads in the fairgrounds. The board took the request under consideration.

William Stevens, representing a Washington committee, asked the board to take action on a county road widening project in the Washington district.

W. J. Pease, proprietor of Pease's bakery, appeared before the board and protested cancelling of bread contract with the county hospital. Charles Veale said the hospital plans to rotate the contract among the bread trucks and the local bakery. Veale denied Pease's allegation that influence by the board of supervisors prompted the cancellation. Veale said if the board of supervisors ever wanted to run the county hospital he would resign.

Chairman Warren Odell and Clerk Ralph E. Deeble signed contracts of sale giving the state division of highways right of way to county property adjoining state highway 20 in the Donner Lake subdivision. Purchase price was $1.

The board authorized a deposit of $628.50 out of the general road fund to be used as matching funds with the state for a resurvey of county roads.

The board leased a No. 12 road grader from the Marysville Tractor & Equipment Co.

Mss. J. M. Orvis appeared before the board and protested taxes on her property in Grass Valley were too high in her estimation. Mrs. Orvis said she pays more taxes than a neighbor with higher valued property. P. G. Scadden, county assessor, declared he believed the assessment was fair. He added he wasn't at the board meeting to discuss fairness of assessments of other property.

The board took under consideration assembly bill 3079 which authorizes $10 a day payment to members of the county school board when it is in session.

The supervisors accepted maps of the Spring Hill subdivision and the Grand View Terrace to be filed with the county recorder.

NEVADA CITY IS GOD'S COUNTRY SAYS FRED EVANS VISITOR HERE

"The Omega Washington district used to be God's country," said Fred W. Evans, Nevada City native visiting here after a departure of 61 years, "but now Nevada City has the honor."

Evans, 75, and self-professed the world's oldest liar, was born Sunday, March 29, 1875, in room 74 of the National hotel, and reserved the room for his stay here. Evans has been spending most of his visit here with Mr. and Mrs. George Legg and Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Rector, old schoolmates.

His father, the late William F. Evans, was Wells Fargo express agent here with offices in the National hotel. Evans recalled times when his father slept against the door of the agency office to guard gold and silver piled on the floor for lack of vault space. Evans recalls delivery to Wells Fargo of a 500-pound gold bar valued at $141,000 from the Malakoff diggings. It was believed to be the largest gold bar ever cast and Evans recalls it lay unguarded on the sidewalk in front of the express office all day, a target of tobacco expectorators.

When Evans was six his family moved to Nevada street. He delivered papers for the Nevada City Daily Transcript. George Welch, operator of a store at the plaza, was an uncle, and Mrs. Harriet Guild was an aunt. Mamie Guild, Oakland, is a cousin.

He recalled many fishing trips to Bowman dam travelling via the stage. He attended Washington grammar school. He remembers his father came to California with Judge Niles Searls from Rensselaer, N. Y. He remembers plank streets and the boom days of the gold era.

The family moved to San Francisco when he was 14. While still a youth he went to Hawaii with Congressman Loud and from there he shipped as cabin boy of a 5-masted bark for a six months trip around the horn to New York with a cargo of sugar.

He served in the first World war as an engineer captain, and was active on the San Jose defense committee and Red Cross work during the recent work.

He is employed by a sheet metal firm in San Francisco, and doesn't intend to retire. His wife died a few months ago.

Evans is a member of the William Glen Masonic lodge, San Jose, and for 30 years has been a deacon of the Disciples of Christ church.

California Hydraulic Mining association will hold a picnic meeting Sunday at Scotts Flat Dam five miles east of here. It is the scene of the one of the first hydraulic operations.

President George Hallock said the meeting will get underway at 1 p.m.

Yuba City Contractor Awarded Bear Valley Road Improvement

Richter Brothers, W. H. Darrough & Sons and M. J. Ruddy, all of Yuba City, were awarded contract for realignment of highway 20 in the Bear Valley area, according to an announcement Friday by the Tahoe national forest headquarters.

Construction work officially started Tuesday.

150 Petitioners Protest Operation of Dog Pound

Nevada City council meeting in city hall last night had more excitement than for many months with 150 petitioners protesting city's method of operating dog pound.

Mrs. John Becker was spokesman for the group and Frank G. Finnegan was counsel.

Frank Stewart urged some type of theater in Pioneer park for production of community pageants and plays. Stewart said the local Little Theatre group will build the theatre if the city furnishes the material.

The council passed a resolution to place two speed limit signs on Nimrod calling for a maximum of 15 miles per hour.

Bill Swain asked the council to oil the airport road. Councilman H. F. Sofge said the city plans to run water pipe to the airport buildings within a few days.

Auto Accident Basis Of Damage Suit Case

Harold Cron, on behalf of his son, John, 14, filed suit in superior court against Mrs. Mathilda Thompson, asking $6,376.12 damages and medical costs for injuries received by the minor in a collision between a car Mrs. Thompson was driving and one driven by the boy on Nov. 26, 1948, at the intersection of Race and Colfax road.

Carl Howe, Nevada City, asks $1800 damages for a fire destroyed truck while in rental to Crescent Pacific Mining company. The truck was burned March 9, 1948.

LINDSAY CALLS ON SUPERVISORS FOR ACTION ON WATER

Assemblyman Francis Lindsay paid another surprise visit to Wednesday's meeting of the Nevada county board of supervisors and again urged the board to allocate money to aid in filing for surplus waters originating in mountain counties and to protect the counties from subsequent filings and use by federal bureaus.

Lindsay warned the board that if the county did not act to protect its water the federal bureau of reclamation could file on the water and move out any amounts of water above what the reclamation bureau considered sufficient for local needs.

Lindsay appeared before the local board May 2 urging the supervisors to take action at that time.

SAWMILL DESTROYED IN WEDNESDAY FIRE

The T. M. Wade sawmill on the south side of Scotts Flat dam reservoir was destroyed by fire Wednesday, within five minutes after the crew left the building for lunch.

The state forestry division dispatched two crews to the fire but a fast start in debris spread the fire too quickly.

CORRECTION

Hugh Steinhoff and S. R. Dahl still remain as owners of the Plaza Garage, and have not sold the business to Ray Scott as we reported last week. Some accounts were assigned to Scott for court action on collection.

BILL EXPANDING MINING AREA VOTED

A measure providing for mining on approximately 7,000,000 acres of public lands withdrawn or reserved for power development has been voted favorable and unanimously by the committee on public lands and is now pending on the house calendar. This measure was introduced by me at the request of miners and other interested parties in the district.

It places all lands withdrawn for power purposes under the general mining laws, subject to a miner operating on the porperty at his own risk if the government uses the area for powersite purposes. In other words, the federal government is protected from liability for damages due to flooding or other taking of the mining property and using the area for powersite development. However, it is believed that in very few instances would a miner suffer very much damage.

The federal agencies over a period of years withdrew from entry and application of mining laws millions of acres of land which might possibly be used for powersite purposes. Ninety-five per cent of this land was withdrawn around 1910. One stream in my district has 35 miles of area along the stream withdrawn for powersites. By and large these powersites areas represent the best remaining potentially good mining property, especially for gold.

In connection with the hearings the bureau of land management proposed many of the changes which they expect to try to put into the general mining laws. All of these were defeated except one requiring the claim location and notice of assessment work to be filed with the nearest district land office.

MINING CLAIMS BILL PASSES

A measure providing for claims settlements with the miners of critical and strategic minerals and metals who suffered losses through no fault of their own during wartime has gone to the White House for signature of the President. It is hoped that the passage of this measure will help the progress of a similar bill for compensation of the gold miners for their out-of-pocket losses under the gold closing order during the war.

The measure for incentive payments for critical and strategic minerals and metals is still tied up in the house rules committee. Some members of the committee are not in favor of any subsidy program for the miners even if it is for materials now being purchased from foreign sources for the stockpile; and, the rules committee is extremely reluctant to give favorable action on any bill which would cost more money. However, better than half of the lead and zinc production in the country has closed down due to the recent drop in prices. Practically all of the underground copper mines are closed and the mining industry throughout the West except for a few big companies is really in dire straits. Great pressure is being exerted from all over the country to get the rules committee and the house leadership to take favorable action on this measure.

"Thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." This verse from Matthew is the Golden Text of the Christian Science lesson-sermon for Sunday, July 10, on the subject "Sacrament."

Included in the sermon are the following citations:

The Bible: "And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered. And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray. And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt" (Mark 14:27, 32 36).

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Consistent prayer is the desire to do right. Prayer means that we desire to walk and will walk in the light so far as we receive it, even though with bleeding footsteps, and that waiting patiently on the Lord, we will leave our real desires to be rewarded by Him" (p. 9).

FIREBALLS PUT FINAL QUENCH TO N.C. SPARK

The Colfax Fireballs, down in the dumps themselves, quenched the last spark of life in the Nevada City Athletics baseball team Monday afternoon in Pioneer park and won 11-4. A holiday Fourth of July game with evidence of too much holidaying didn't show any spectacular playing and supporting spectators stayed away in droves.

Colfax scored three times in the first inning and repeated in the second, enough runs to sew up the ball game. Clark and McGahan singled and Hill tripled them home, Hill scoring on Sypnicki's infield out.

The Athletics picked up a run in the first when Childers singled and was pushed home by Painter's single.

Clark singled in the second and scored in front of McGahan's double and McGahan and Hutchison scored when Fouyer failed to hold Latino's sharp-breaking left-handed slants. Kienle added a seventh run for the Fireballs in the third when another of Latino's hooks got by Haddy.

Goldsberry drew a walk to start the local fourth and Painter bounced a mighty one beyond recall over the left field logs for an automatic double. With none out Kosinski, Haddy and Bernardis couldn't drive them home.

Kosinksi singled in the sixth and Latino lashed a double upon the right field bank for Nevada City's second score.

The Fireballs iced the game in the seventh with three runs off four hits and a Goldsberry error. Kienle drove Hutchison home for the visitors' final run in the eighth.

An Athletics rally in the ninth was cut short when Tiger Thompson was trapped between second and third to end the game.

Latino keeps his hooks low to batters and gives his infield a busy afternoon when he is in the box. A week ago against Lincoln the local infield had 24 assists. Monday's game kept the infield busy with 25 assists while the outfield had two for a total of 27 assists. (Editor's note: We don't know whether it is a record or not, but it is the first game we ever recall with as many assists as putouts.)

Saturday night the Athletics should break a losing streak when it travels to Roseville to play a night game against the winless Roseville Athletic club.

GRASS VALLEY HAS NO MERCY FOR ATHLETICS

The Grass Valley Braves, currently the powerhouse of the Placer-Nevada league showed no mercy to the Nevada City Athletics in Watt park Sunday afternoon in an 8-2 game before approximately 1000 fans.

Jacke Goldsberry pitched for Nevada City and while the Braves never hit him hard nine free trips to first base helped the home team's victory.

Only extra-base hits of the game were Goldsberry's fence-rattling triple and Latino's home run to the right field fence. Painter lashed a long one to the left field fence but Plumtree grabbed it after a beautiful long chase.

Grass Valley's first three batters scored what proved to be enough for victory. Farrel singled with a 3-2 count, Hooper and Urbano walked. Plumtree singled Farrell and Hooper home and Urbano came home on a wild pitch.

Nevada City's two scores resulted from the extra-base hits. Painter flied to Hooper to score Goldsberry in the fourth and Latino homered in the ninth.

Mann gave up eight hits for the Braves but kept them so well scattered the Athletics could only dent home twice.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENTS REVEAL INCREASES

Nevada county schools are not likely to receive additional monies for 1949-50 programs over last year's apportionments according to a legislative letter received here by Superintendent of Schools Walter A. Carlson.

Assembly bill 2120 would have provided for $30,000,000 additional support to schools.

Apportionment to the schools is based on average daily attendance records. That amount is now $120 per unit of ADA.

NEVADA COUNTY TOPS CALIFORNIA AVERAGE IN U. S. BONDS SALES

With three weeks of sales yet to be credited, Nevada county has reached 105.1 per cent of its goal in the U. S. savings bonds "Opportunity Drive," compared with a state figure of 82.3 per cent.

C. R. Clinch, chairman of the treasury department's volunteer savings bonds committee in this county, reported sales of $51,547.00 toward the county quota of $49,000.

"Now that we have exceeded our quota," Clinch said, "we should not rest on our laurels. It is only natural that we should strive to surpass the bond selling record of all the 46 other counties in northern California."

Clinch said that he and the members of the savings bonds committee are very gratified over the splendid showing. He expressed hope that the efforts of individuals, companies and groups will continue as a permanent long-range program to promote regular thrift and the building of community reserve purchasing power.
